Advance Medical Directives

What Are Advance Medical Directives?

These documents could be a living will or a durable power of attorney for health care (also called a health-care proxy). They allow you to give directions about your future medical care. Having an advanced directive is good for everyone young or old, since accidents and illness can strike at any time. It's your right to accept or refuse medical care. Advance directives can protect this right if you become mentally or physically unable to choose or tell someone your wishes.

Deciding What You Want

Before making an advance directive, think about what's important to you. How would keeping or losing the ability to do things you value affect your choice of treatment? Find out about all the treatments open to you. Then you can decide the level of care that you would want. Advance directives can help you protect your right to make medical choices, help your family avoid the stress of making hard decisions and help your doctor by giving him guidelines for your care.

Recording Your Wishes

Once you know what level of medical care you want, you can protect your wishes by putting them in writing. With an advanced directive, you can name someone else to make medical choices for you (durable power of attorney for health care) or you can state the treatments you'd choose or not choose (living will).

Living Will:

Explains your wishes in writing about your health care if you have a terminal condition. They are called "living" wills because they take effect while a patient is still alive.

Durable Power of Attorney:

In writing, you can name a person (called a proxy) to make decisions for you if you become unconscious or mentally unable to decide.

Be Clear About What's Important To You

Think about what's important to you in life. This is the first step in deciding what medical care you'd want if you were near death. Answer the questions below and talk about the answers with family and friends...

- How much do you value being able to do things on your own?
- How much do you value physical activity?
- What do you fear most about being ill or injured?
- Is it important for you to be physically, mentally or financially independent?
- How would you feel if you could no longer do things that you enjoy?
- How would you feel about being moved from your home?
- How would you feel about being cared for in a hospital or nursing home at the end of your life?

It's important for me to:

■ die without pain and suffering

■ leave my family with good memories

■ act with my religious beliefs

■ be able to make my own decisions

■ not burden my family

■ be with my loved ones

Advanced directives can limit life-prolonging measures when there is little or no chance of recovery.

You may decide not to be put in the hospital if you are terminally ill or permanently unconscious. You may decide against any treatments that will not cure you. Advanced directives can help you make known your feelings about:

- Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation (CPR)

When the heart stops (cardiac arrest), doctors and nurses use special measures to try and restart the heart. This may include massaging the heart, giving medicine, or using electrical shock.

- Intravenous (IV) therapy

Can be used to provide food, water and or medicine through a tube placed in the vein.

- Feeding Tubes

If you are no longer able to swallow food, your doctor may have you tube fed through your nose, your abdomen or intravenously (through the vein).

- Respirators (Artificial Breathing)

Respirators are machines that breathe for you. In your Living Will, you can make it clear whether you want this kind of help or not.

How Do I Create Advanced Directives?

- Check the laws in your state regarding living wills and durable power of attorney for health care.
- Put your wishes in writing, and be as specific as you can be. You can complete and sign the forms attached to this handout.
- Sign and date your advance directive. You must have two adults, other than your health care worker, witness and sign the form before it is legal.

What do I do with my Living Will and Healthcare Power of Attorney?

- Keep a card in your wallet stating that you have advanced directives and where to find them.
- Give your doctor a copy to be kept as part of your medical records. If you use a durable power of attorney for health care, be sure to give a copy to the person who will be making decisions for you.
- Talk about your advanced directives with your family and friends. Give copies to a relative or friend who might be called in an emergency.

Review your advanced directives regularly and make changes as needed. Tell your doctor, family and friends about any changes you make.

Questions and Answers About Advanced Directives:

1. What if I change my mind?

You can change or cancel your advanced directive at any time. Make sure you tell your doctors, health care workers, hospital and friends that your wishes have changed. Ask them to tear up and destroy old copies.

2. What can be done if my wishes are not being carried out?

You should talk with your doctor first. If it is not resolved at this point, talk with the nurse, social workers and/or chaplain.

Your Living Will and Healthcare Power of Attorney involve some of life's most important choices. Don't put off asking for help. Talk to your doctor about any questions or ask him to refer you to someone who is qualified to help. For more information you can contact:
